Computer Science Education Week: December 8-14, 2014

Hour of Code for Teens

Hour of Code is a one-hour introduction to computer science, designed to demystify code and show that anyone can learn the basics. Hour of Code events take place all over the world throughout Computer Science Education Week— check out the map at <http://hourofcode.com>!

Coding with Microsoft

Chicago Public Library and YOUmedia have partnered with Microsoft to offer exciting Hour of Code programs for teens at Harold Washington Library Center!

Microsoft Programs

- Monday, December 8: XBOX Kinect Demo
- Tuesday, December 9: Windows App Studio
- Thursday, December 11: Project Spark

YOUmedia Programs

- Arduino coding with LED lights
- Library of Games Hack 'n' Slash gaming livestream
- Communal collage poem using Mozilla Thimble

Teens who participate in two or more Hour of Code activities will be invited to visit the Microsoft Office in the Aon Center for a special workshop on Friday, December 12.

To find out what's happening at other branches, check out the calendar on the reverse side of this sheet. For more information, please visit www.chipublib.org or call the branch at the number listed.
